

DOG COATS

The state of canine coats is sad.
I've seen some dreadful ugly clothes in which four-footed friends were clad, and most of them my Scottie loathes.

Their art work features clashing themes in styles that almost drive one mad, in colors dragged from nightmare dreams,
conflicting patterns, mostly bad,
that bash so loud they frazzle wits.

Of all the different coats he's had there's only one that really fits:
hand-woven wool of tartan plaid.

by Lee Netzler