

SPRING HAIRCUT

The winter has been long and cold and signs of spring just now appear.
His latest haircut is so old it's carbon-dated to last year.

We haven't trimmed him for so long that after such neglect we note it's time that we put right what's wrong and clipper him out of his coat.

His eyebrows are so blinding dense it's doubtful he can even see.
We'll save his sight through shear good sense
by cutting them dramatically.

His legs and feet are mostly fur,
his tail is bottle-brush disguised.
We need to scissors him for sure until we sculpt him down life-sized.

Yes, Sampson would be envious to have his hair as thick and strong.
But now, stand back, we're serious to make this shaver clip along.

by Lee Netzler