PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Oct. 1981

It was a joy to be at Montgomery County this year. The weather was that exceptional year that was beautiful!

The Specials class was so large it completely encircled the ring. When Mr. Bartos told them to "take them around", there was just one complete ring of Scottish Terriers. That sight alone was worth the trip.

Everyone seemed pleased with the new headquarters at the Treadway Inn, and the dinner was truly a feast. Again the number of people attending the dinner increased, we had 155 people from all over the country. As all of you who were at the dinner are aware, we all owe a large "THANK YOU" to Lorayne and Bart Lapin. Those two people, with the help of Faith Harrop for the last four years, have been handling the dinner and all the arrangements for the past ten years. Thanks to all who worked, and especially to our judges Mrs. Barbara DeSaye and Mr. Bob Bartos.

The next rotating specialty will be held June 12th. 1982 in Seattle, Wash. Hope to see you all there.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the past Officers and Board Members. Their time, expense and work given to the S.T.C.A. is immeasurable. Am looking forward to working with the newly elected members, who I am sure will contribute new ideas to the Club, from which we will all benefit.

Respectfully,
Catherine P. Ridgley, S.T.C.A. Pres.

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Scottie Friends,

We want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your thoughts, prayers, words and deeds of kindness and concern at Montgomery County. It is very comforting to know that we have so many good friends! We would like to be able to thank each of you individually, but since that's not possible we'll do it collectively.

We really appreciate all the notes and phone calls to follow up. Bart is fine! It was such a relief to know his collapse was only an allergic reaction to a bee sting. We are extremely grateful to all our good Scottie Friends.

Thank You!

Sincerely,
Bart & Lorayne Lapin

CRITIQUE OF 1981
MONTGOMERY COUNTY SWEEPSTAKES

by Barbara DeSaye

Many thanks to the officers and board of the STCA for inviting me to judge the Sweepstakes. It was something I longed to do and now that it is over, I know it was the wonderful experience I knew it would be.

I want to thank the exhibitors for the very impressive entry of puppies shown to me.

I felt the overall quality of the youngsters very good, especially the bitches.

Conditioning was good in most cases.

I think the one thing that concerned me the most was so many narrow fronts on our Scots. The standard says, immense power in a small size. Powerful is not narrow! This is something we should do a lot of thinking about while planning our breeding programs.

Toplines and lay backs seem to be much improved. Also bites. I saw only one bad mouth. Eyes need some improvement but on the whole not too bad.

I was very pleased with my three Division Winners, especially my 9 - 12 month bitch and Best in Sweeps, she was lovely. She has a gorgeous small, dark eye and a great neck and shoulder lay back. Such a pretty young lady. I wish I could have taken her home with me. Congratulations to her breeder and owners; they must be very proud of her.

Thank you again, it was a wonderful day for me.

Very Sincerely,
Barbara DeSaye

JUDGING MATCHES

By Kennan C. Glaser

The most important way an aspirant judge can gain the required show experience is through judging AKC sanctioned matches. Most AKC approved dog clubs offer one or more matches every year and the only requirement of the judges they select is that they be in good standing with AKC.

It is in poor taste to ask for a match assignment. The key to getting judging assignments is the regular participation in dog club activities. People who work on committees and other club functions are usually thought of first when judging assignments are passed out.

The key points of judging matches are to develop good ring procedures and good ring habits. In order to develop these good habits the prospective judge should handle himself or herself as if he or she were judging a point show. Good judging procedures should be followed at all times.

There are a number of things that can be done to prepare oneself for a judging assignment. The standards for each breed of dog to be judged should be thoroughly read and understood. A good source of these standards is a current copy of the AKC's publication THE COMPLETE DOG BOOK. Many judges make themselves a chart comparing characteristics of each breed. Notes on 3 x 5 cards can be carried in a shirt pocket or purse to be studied.

While at dog shows the actions of judges can be carefully watched. Each judge will have established patterns of action that will suit his or her style yet make sure that a thorough job of judging is done. Notes can be made on how the ring is laid out, where the examining table is placed, where the contestants are lined up and how the dogs are gaited. It will soon be learned that most judges have developed habits which conserve their energy yet allow them adequate time and freedom to do a thorough job.

The judge must dress the part.¹ A judge should be dressed in conservative clothing that does not draw attention to himself or herself. A sport coat and slacks, dress shirt and tie are in order for men. A simple dress or pantsuit is appropriate for women judges. Colors should be muted. Women's skirts should not be excessively short revealing underclothing when she stoops to examine dogs, and not be easily blown or billowed by the wind, making some dogs behave poorly or shy away. If judging outside, a conservative dress hat may be in order to provide shade, since sunglasses should not be worn. Correct shoes are also very important; sneakers are never worn. Shoes should be comfortable and stable. Women should avoid spike heeled shoes. And if the match is outdoors consideration should be given to raincoats, rubbers and other rain gear.

There are a few other important items to be brought to judging assignments. Every judge should carry a ball point pen to mark the judge's book. In addition a fold-open plastic covered clipboard is preferred so that in rainy weather the judge's book can be protected. If reading glasses are needed, they should not be forgotten. Lastly, a copy of the Standards should be brought.

On the day of the judging assignment, the new judge should plan to be at ringside about one half hour before scheduled to go into the ring. It is very important to stay away from exhibitors; they should not be given an opportunity to talk with the judge prior to judging. Appearances are important. A judge never wants to have anyone think that he or she will be unduly influenced.

When the ring is ready, the judge will want to make sure that everything is suitable for his or her ring procedure. At indoor shows it is important to make sure that the mats overlap properly so that the exhibitors, while walking counterclockwise, will not trip over loose ends. The position of the examining table, the judge's table and the place markings should be carefully placed. The place markers are set so that they are easily seen from outside the ring and so that the winners can accept their ribbons then move smoothly and quickly out of the ring.

Before beginning the judging assignment the stewards should be told where the dogs are to be lined up, what to do about late comers and absentees and how the ribbons are to be arranged. Questions should be encouraged but the judge should never have an occasion to look at the catalog if there is one present.

Throughout the day's assignments the judge must remember to stick to his procedure. First, when all of the dogs are in the ring, the judge's book should be checked to make sure all of the armbands match the numbers listed for the particular class. Most judges will place a tiny check mark(✓) next to each number. Absentees will not be marked until the class has been judged and the placements are marked, but errors in the judge's book should be corrected by calling the match secretary before the judging begins.

The actual judging starts when the dogs enter the ring. After checking armbands, the dogs are moved in line around the ring. Excessive movements should be avoided; most experienced judges will have the dogs go around only once. In this exercise the judge will begin to set in his mind the dogs he likes the most.

Next each dog is individually examined. Here the judge looks for disqualifying faults such as blindness, monorchidism or specific faults listed in the standards. If a disqualifying fault is found, it is noted in the judge's book and the dog is dismissed from the ring immediately with a simple explanation to the handler. Also, if at any time a dog threatens the judge, it too should be dismissed and properly noted in the judge's book. If there is a doubt, the honorable thing is to look it up in the standard or ask the match secretary.

During the examination, specific characteristics should be mentally noted. Here again the judge should have a consistent pattern of going over the dogs. Normally the head is examined first, then eyes, teeth, ear placement and specifics of the head. Next the judge's hands move to the shoulders to check for placement and layback. Movements of hands should be gentle, avoiding any hint of heavy handedness. Layback can be checked by locating how the shoulder blades are placed in relation to the legs and chest. On heavy coated dogs, special techniques can be developed to place fingers down through the coat to the tip of the shoulder blades without disturbing it unduly. The hands are next moved down the shoulders to the legs where elbow placement, dew claw removal and feet pads can be checked. Chest and rib spring are checked before moving past the front of the dog. On short legged dogs, sliding one's fist under the dog's front can give a good indication of chest letdown. The judge can then step around the rear of the dog feeling the dog's coat on several places over its body. Backbones should be checked to see if skillful grooming has disguised a dip or roachiness. The rump and thighs and the existence of proper testicles are checked next. Finally, the hind legs and feet are checked. One important thing should be kept in mind - balance: how do all of the parts fit together and is there symmetry in the way the dog is constructed.

After the specific examinations, the dogs are individually gaited, keeping in mind the specifics of each dog found in the examinations. Some judges will go over all of the dogs before gaiting them and others will gait each dog as soon as it is examined. This procedure is a personal preference item. In gaiting, most judges will use one of three patterns; a triangle, an 'L' or simply 'down and back'. Here, consistency is the rule. Whichever pattern a judge uses, he should stick to it. During this procedure the judge will solidify his or her top contenders.

After gaiting all of the dogs, the judge will pick the best four dogs. In unusually large classes, dogs which are not in contention can be excused but the number remaining for the final decision should not be less than 5. If one of the remainder becomes lame there will still be enough dogs for the four ribbons. Some judges gait the dogs again and some bring them together in the middle of the ring. Whichever procedures are followed, they should be purposeful and time efficient. In order not to make a mistake, the dogs can be arranged in order of preference.

Lastly, the dogs are moved around the ring for one last look. This is the last chance the judge has to change his mind. Only once around the ring should be enough to solidify a good decision. Once a decision is made the dogs are stopped and the judge points to the winners and announces the placements. Picking placements 'on the fly' is incorrect because it leads to errors. Although unnecessary speaking is in poor taste, the announcements of placings or instructions to contestants should be made in a firm voice.

Before ribbons are awarded, the judge must mark the judge's book. It is extremely important that the book is marked promptly so that contestants do not leave the ring before the win is recorded. Care should be taken that the contestants stand at the proper marker. If an exhibitor stands in the wrong position the judge should instruct that exhibitor where to stand. Although the steward can have ribbons ready, the judge is the only person who should award the prizes. When the next and succeeding classes are brought into the ring the same procedures should be followed through to the end of the match.

After judging is completed the judge's book must be checked for errors and then signed. All errors and other notations should be initialed by the judge.

The qualities a judge should be developing at matches are decisiveness and confidence; and confidence follows decisiveness. Criticisms will occur from spectators and exhibitors; even the very best, most experienced judges are not immune. The prospective judge must develop a 'thick skin' to such criticisms or face a very unpleasant judging career.

Once the match judging is ended, the judge should avoid discussing the decisions or dogs with others. Such discussions will help no one but will only tend to cause hard feelings and possible distrust of the judge.

Dog judging can be a rewarding, satisfying and enjoyable venture, but the judge needs to know and follow good procedures for full satisfaction to be achieved.

Excerpts from "The First American Standard for Judges"

By R.C. Kurz from the German Shepherd Guardian

General Appearance - The first impression of a good judge is that of a tough-minded (but fair), alert (but gentle) man or woman. Muscular fitness and nimbleness are desirable but not mandatory. Soft living seems unavoidable.

The judge should be neither too tall nor too short. If, as a rule of thumb, he must sink to his knees to pet the dog, he is probably too tall. On the other hand, if he must jump into the air to check testicles, he is probably too short. Measurements should be taken from the top of the head with the hair parted and so pushed down that it will show only the actual height of the frame or structure of the judge.

A judge of desirable size and proper flesh should average between 70 and 300 pounds depending primarily upon sex and upon how fat he or she is.

The judge should be stamped with a look of nobility and justice . . . difficult to define but unmistakable after the show. The good judge has a distinct personality, marked direct and fearless (but not hostile) expression of self-confidence and indiscriminate friendliness . . . or at least must not belie lack of such friendliness until later back at the hotel.

Secondly, sex characteristics should be strongly marked lest, when the judge hands you a ribbon, you say "Thank you, Sir" to a lady or conversely. The question of monorchids and cryptorchids should be left up to your florist and to just what the club can afford.

Coat - In cold climates the judge should be equipped with a double coat. The underwear may vary with the season. At no time, however, should a judge shed in the ring.

Gait - Judges who tend to move on all fours should be avoided, as should those who stagger and fall down a lot. Forward motion should be achieved by placing one foot in front of another. Hopping is also permitted, and in fact, often makes for a livelier show.

Stance - While viewing the dogs, the judge should stand in the center of the ring, feet spread as a "parade rest"; the right hand should be held firmly in the left armpit with the left hand crossing over under the right arm pit. The chin must be tucked solidly into the chest . . . eyes squinting.

Once the judge has assumed this viewing posture, the ring steward should count the number of times the class circles. If that count should exceed 20 times he might unobtrusively move out from his position to the judge's side and check his condition. Older, more experienced judges have been known to doze off in this position while younger specimens, particularly members of the party-going set might still be so gassed from the pre-show festivities that they passed out.

Minor Faults - It is better if a judge can speak in audible tones. His vocabulary may be limited to phrases like: "Loose leads", "Walk them", "One more time", and the numbers "1,2,3,4", but he must be heard. If this is impossible a set of flash cards must be provided.

Disqualifying Faults - Judges who point, whoop and holler, or who laugh hysterically at an exhibitor entering the ring with a particularly poor specimen are disqualified. Likewise a judge who delays proceedings while the handler make out checks to him in the ring is not permitted to participate further. Any judge who attacks a handler in the ring (be it he/her; she/him; he/her; she/her/or whatever) is warned three times in writing after which he must be dismissed. As in the obedience competition, a judge relieving himself in the ring is expelled therefrom. This rule has recently been broadened to include stewards.

TRAINING A SCOTTY PUPPY

By Donald Massaker, Stonehedge Kennels

Our main objective in "socialization" and training a puppy here at Stonehedge is to wind up with a Scotty who is healthy, has a well adjusted temperament and an outgoing personality. Hopefully the puppy will go into the show ring, but if that isn't the Scotty's destiny, and it is placed as a pet, the new owners will be happy for the training. Plus the Scotty will be a 'lady' or 'gentleman' at its regular grooming appointments for its entire life.

Let's begin: after the dam has whelped the litter, she and her pups go to the vet. The dam for a post natal examination and all necessary injections. The puppies are then examined. On the third day the pups are returned to the vet for removal of dew claws. For the puppies sake, the removal of the dew claws are well worth the trouble and will ease future grooming.

The puppies are kept separate and quarantined for the first six weeks of their life since puppies have not been vaccinated. However, the pups are weighed at regular intervals, nails are checked and clipped when needed. At approximately four weeks of age each pup is put on the grooming table and lightly brushed, nails are checked and excess hair is clipped in the rear. Placing pups on the table, brushing and giving individual attention is done everyday.

At six weeks of age, after their first DHL vaccination, the pups are moved to the kennel office, to the "puppy box". Here they meet different people and children, who are encouraged to hold and pet the pups.

In the morning the pups are taken from the puppy box and individually placed in a crate or Safari. While the pup is in the crate the puppy box is cleaned and made up with a bowl of fresh water and pups breakfast. The pup will cry at first when placed in the crate, this is understandable but necessary. The pups stay in the crates for approximately 1 to 2 hours while the other kennel work is accomplished.

When taken out of the crate, each pup is put on the grooming table. He is brushed and the puppy fluff is lightly pulled down. While on the table the pup is put in a "show pose" and encouraged to "stay" — only for a few seconds, increasing the time as the pups get used to it. Praise is a must after each session. Never leave your pup on the table unattended, even for a second or two. The pups are then returned to the box for breakfast, play and sleep.

At eight weeks, after their second shot, and weather permitting, the pups are put outside in the sun in an exercise pen. Each is put on a show lead and encouraged to walk on your left side — only a short distance in the beginning, stopping frequently, put in a show pose, baited with liver pieces

LATEST DATA ON SCOTTIE VWD TESTING

By W. Jean Dodds DVM

"I thought you'd like to see a 1981 update of the data printed in the April AKC Gazette article. This new table includes June 1980 - June 1981 (May 15th actually), what you can see from it is the continuing trend to have fewer carrier and affected Scotties with each ensuing year. The overall prevalence for the period up to June 1980 was 28% and now is down to 24%, i.e. began before June 1979 at 35%, to 28% a year later; to 24% two years later. If you look at the period just between June 1979 - 1981 (21% + 7%, each) the prevalence for those 2 years is 16%. You will also note that the trend is highly statistically significant with a 'p' value of 0.001 (less than 1 in 1,000 chance that this change is merely coincidental).

"I've also attached a description of the breakdown of results of various types of matings. This attests to the overall accuracy and reliability of detecting carriers in the population."

n = number of dogs tested. N.S. = not significant.

1. SCOTTISH TERRIER. Results of testing over 2300 dogs of this breed have identified 77 homozygous, affected dogs and over 580 asymptomatic heterozygotes. Over 100 obligate heterozygous parents or offspring of affected Scotties were available for testing. Of these, all but 4 had FVIII:Ag levels of 50% as would be expected; the 4 outliers had values between 51-72% of normal. Similarly, over 400 offspring were tested that had one normal and one heterozygous parent. Of these pups, the breakdown was also as expected - 49% had FVIII:Ag levels 50% and the remaining 51% had 50% FVIII:Ag. In mating where both parents had FVIII:Ag levels of 50%, the living progeny were: 13% with undetectable FVIII:Ag (homozygous, affected); 38% with levels between 9-50% (heterozygous); and 49% with levels 50%. When these data were corrected for stillbirths and neonatal deaths, presumably from hemorrhagic complications, the expected 1:2:1 ratio was approximated. Thus, the data indicate that VWD autosomal recessive inheritance in this breed.

The accuracy of the screening program is attested to by the fact that only 5 progeny of the 177 tested with few normal-testing parents (FVIII:Ag 50%) would have been misclassified (FVIII:Ag values were 45-50%).

and praised. I pick a 'point' to where, or how far I'll walk the pup and 'show' train him. Coming back to home base is done on a loose lead, this is "fun time", whether running, walking fast or just sniffing the surrounding area. The pup thus gets to know 'business' from 'fun' and is anxious to please you.

To get or keep the puppies interest in food and me, I leave him loose in the kennel kitchen while dinner is being prepared. He gets used to pots and pans clanking and the usual kitchen noises. During this time I offer him a small treat or a sample of food. The pup is then returned to his (or her) litter mates in the puppy box and all are fed.

At twelve weeks you have more or less picked your "show dog", and you start bringing him to a local handling class. The first time he attends class he'll need reassurance, and patiencs on your part. If he has fun and isn't 'pushed', he will enjoy the idea of dog shows.

He is now old enough to be segregated and put in a separate crate to sleep and eat. He will soil his crate occassionally, but if you keep him and his bed (crate) clean, he'll try not to dirty where he sleeps and eats. During the day, weather permitting, he is put in a run outside, (ours are covered), in the boarding kennel, next to a friendly pet. He will bark at, and play with the other dogs, (in his own run). He becomes used to the sounds of the kennel. Ordinarily every dog is boarded at one time or another during his life, and your pup will adjust much better when his time comes.

In conclusion: firmness, with a light touch and praise go a long way in making a happy show dog. Patience on your part, and common sense will see you through.

OBEDIENCE

By Ruth Tryon, STCA Obedience Chairman

Mac's friends and admirers will be happy to hear Scotties are doing very nicely in the Obedience ring. Each year brings the good news that more Scotties have completed degrees and during STCA's 1980-81 year 10 Scotties have earned a C.D. and 2 a C.D.X. Next year should be a banner year as 13 currently have legs toward their Novice degrees and that is not counting those who are just starting or will be in the ring later. One Scot is already on his way to his Open degree and another to his U.D. We should see several C.D.X.'s completed as there were a good number who finished their C.D.'s last year and will soon be appearing in the ring. The same holds true for U.D.. Those C.D.X. dogs of last year are beginning to enter Utility competition.

One weekend this past summer saw 7 Scottish Terriers entered in each of two Obedience Trials. The enthusiasm of the Scottie handlers and not only the encouragement but the desire of each one to see every Scottie do well was heartwarming. When one Scottie earned his first leg in Utility the ringside crowd, regardless of what breed they had, cheered. You could hear the applause throughout the building.

Scotties are welcomed in Obedience circles and we are seeing more and more of them. I might add, they are doing well too. In one area of the country they hope to have a Scottish Terrier Fun Obedience Match! It should be an exciting and fun-filled event.

But we should have more Scotties in Obedience! In going over the records, as published in the AKC Gazette from October 1980 through September 1981, we find 6,063 Scotties were registered with the AKC and 157 completed their Championship. We know Scotties finished in Obedience and doubtless a goodly number of Scots are being shown in both areas and will soon finish. But what about all those other Scotties — by far the majority registered. Doubtless dearly beloved by their families — who couldn't help but love a Scottie — but they and their families are missing one of the great experiences life offers, a genuinely truly close rapport between man and his dog as developed through Obedience training. In most cases we are to blame because we are not encouraging these people enough to train their Scots.

Not only will they find the relationship between themselves and Mac a unique one but for his own safety and well being he should have some Obedience training. This, of course, goes for all dogs. To see a dog run away from you into danger is a terrifying experience. Yet a bit of training could save you and Mac from a possible tragedy. Your relationship with your neighbors, no matter how good it seems now, can't help but improve. A well trained Obedience dog is a joy forever. It is a new dimension in life.

As members of the STCA we should be particularly interested in the well being of all Scotties. We not only have an obligation to breed better and healthier ones but to see that we breed intelligent ones and that their keen minds are given an opportunity to enrich not only their own lives but those of their owners. When we place a puppy in a home, let's make sure we encourage not only proper care, feeding, grooming, etc. but also training! We are involved with a wonderful breed and we are in many cases neglecting its complete welfare.

Ask anyone who has tried it - training a dog in Obedience may have its problems but its moments of joy and fun exceed the others. It is a wonderful sport where everyone hopes everyone else will do well. Mac's heeling might have been better but how beautifully he came in on the recall! It is just great rewarding fun. Try it and encourage others to. You will never regret it.

The following is taken from Front and Finish, March 1980 and is so true!

OBEDIENCE IS:

Finding out how much patience you really have;
 Trying to explain to your child's teacher that you cannot attend PTA meetings because you have to go to dog school;
 Learning that you can hold your breath for 3 minutes during the Long Downs;
 Gripping because you have to get up at 6 AM every weekday morning to go to work, and then getting up at 5 AM on Sunday to drive 100 miles to a dog show;
 Discovering you can't tell your left foot from your right one;
 Remarking that your dog always does one particular exercise perfectly at home and then getting in the ring and that's the only one he blows;
 Realizing that your dog enjoys watching you go pick up the dumbbell for him;
 Leaving your dog for a Recall and hearing the patter of little feet behind you;
 Standing at the ring entrance wondering why you keep putting yourself through this agony.

WORTH EVERY MINUTE OF IT. (from Dog Lovers Digest)

Keep on working on Mac's heeling and insist on his attention. They are the basis of all Obedience work. Good luck!

When a businessman visiting a small town lost his traveling companion, his treasured dog, he asked to have a notice printed in the local paper offering $1,000 for its return. Evening came, but no paper appeared. The man waited for some time, then went to the newspaper office. But he saw no one around except the night watchman. "Isn't the evening paper coming out?" he asked.

"I doubt it, sir," said the watchman. "The whole staff's out looking for a lost dog."
