On the warpath from Fort Wayne to Yorkville

Ch. Anstamm Apache

After two serious assaults on heavily-defended Fort Wayne (Gr. II at Sturgis and Gr. II at Marion). Apache captured the Terrier Group at Northeastern Indiana under judge Edd Biven. The Bureau of Indian Affairs reports that Apache was involved in a skirmish in central Michigan (Gr. II at Jaxon) before he attacked the Chicago circuit. After a brief battle at Skokie Valley (Gr. IV), Apache closed out his successful 1986 campaign by capturing the last Terrier Group of the year at Yorkville KC under judge Bob Smith (shown above). Apache has been exclusively owner-handled by Miriam Stamm (above), Cindy Cooke & Linda Nolan. His record in 6 months of showing:

21 BOB's
2 Gr. I's
4 Gr. II's
1 Gr. III
6 Gr. IV's

We dedicate this edition to Louise Ellsworth, Bagpiper editor for eight years and recipient of the 1982 Anstamm Achievement Award: "for her many years of outstanding service . . . her continuous effort to support interest in both the National and Regional clubs, and her constant encouragement and willingness to help novices." Louise passed away in the fall of 1986 after a long illness.

COVER STORY

Am. & Can. Ch. Glenby Gallant Lad (VWD clear) has more than lived up to our hopes & dreams!! Not only was he a top showman -- BIS, Multi-Group & Specialty winner -- but he has proven himself as a top sire with 20 champions and more on their way! Eric's kids are more than just finishing, 4 have gone on to win the points at specialties (2 speciality Bests) and 3 Sweepstakes winners. 6 have won groups (some several times), with others placing in the groups. At 2 separate National Rotating Specialties 1 won the points and another won the Sweepstakes with the littermates going 2nd and 3rd.

Eric is well known as a prepotent sire. He throws a lot of himself even bred to out-cross bitches which the majority of his champions are. He still is very consistent in helping shorten backs, fronts and rears, giving beautiful heads, small ears, dark small eyes, hard straight coats, proper size with bone, plus outgoing temperments. Needless to say, we at Glenby are very proud of the contribution Eric has been able to make to the Scottish Terrier breed!! We thank all the breeders who have supported and honored us by breeding their lovely bitches to our Gallant Lad, were happy with the results, and came back for more.

PHOTOGRAPHS USED FOR REPRODUCTION IN THE BAGPIPER

There seems to be some confusion as to what type photograph reproduces best in the Bagpiper (or any other publication) . . . . BLACK AND WHITE ALWAYS REPRODUCES BETTER. We understand that all dog show photographers now shoot in color, and color will usually reproduce well. However, you should always keep in mind the color of the background behind the dog, remembering that red or shades of red (dark pink) are seen by the camera as BLACK (or almost black). A good example of this can be seen in the photograph on the inside front cover of the November 1986 issue. The plaque in the lower left hand corner is a Scot head on a RED background. You can see for yourself that this reproduces (for all intensive purposes) as black.

You can request the photographer to give you a black and white print, and you can also ask him/her to develop the photograph so that it prints a little lighter than the actual one.

For the best results in photographs, we recommend that you wear light colors if your dog is dark or black, and remembering that the opposite is true of the wheatons and light brindles, i.e. wear darker colors. With this in mind, you will be better pleased with the results, photograph AND reproduction in magazines.

Here are some facts about your Bagpiper which may be of interest to you. We publish four (4) times a year. Deadlines are:

JANUARY 15	Winter	The Stud Dog Issue
APRIL 15	Spring	The Rotating Specialty
JULY 15	Summer
OCTOBER 15	Fall	Montgomery County

Readers can reasonably expect delivery of each issue six to eight (6-8) weeks after the deadline.

Letters to the Editor

Recent issues of the Bagpiper have contained ads that I believe are misleading in one of two ways. One such ad is where a dog is described as a "multiple Best in Show winner," but the advertiser fails to mention that the shows were Canadian or other foreign shows. Because the Bagpiper is an American magazine, the average reader logically infers that these Bests in Show were at American shows. The other type of misleading ad is one which describes a dog as, for example, "#9 ranked Scottish Terrier" without specifying which rating system is being cited. This creates confusion and hard feelings, particularly in the owner of the dog who may be ranked #9 in some other system. It is my understanding that "Kennel Review", "Terrier Type", "Canine Chronicle" and other all-breed magazines solve both of these problems by requiring foreign Bests in Show to be so labeled, and by requiring all advertisers to include the name of the system in which their dog is ranked. I recommend a similar editorial policy for the Bagpiper.

On the positive side, I want to mention a person I observed at some shows during the Chicago Christmas circuit. This person owns and exhibits a top-ranked Scottie bitch special. Just prior to the Chicago circuit, this bitch had won her third Specialty BOB and two Group placements at the all-breed shows following the Specialty. The bitch was shown twice at Chicago and went home without a ribbon. The owner, being human, had to feel disappointment, and maybe a little anger and resentment. There are few of us so saintly that we don't feel these emotions. What impressed me, however, was that this person gave no hint of any such negative reaction. Her congratulations to the winners were plainly more heartfelt than the perfunctory tight smiles so many of us often exchange. So, thank you, Marge Drake, for reminding us that it takes more than a classy dog to be a real winner.

Recently we informed you that the "New champion Listing" for our scottie Scarista's Sterling Lady should have listed Scarista's Rocky. He earned his championship in 1985 and she earned her championship much earlier, that she should have been in a much earlier issue. It makes it seem that it took an awfully long time for Rocky to finish—he finished in 9 shows!

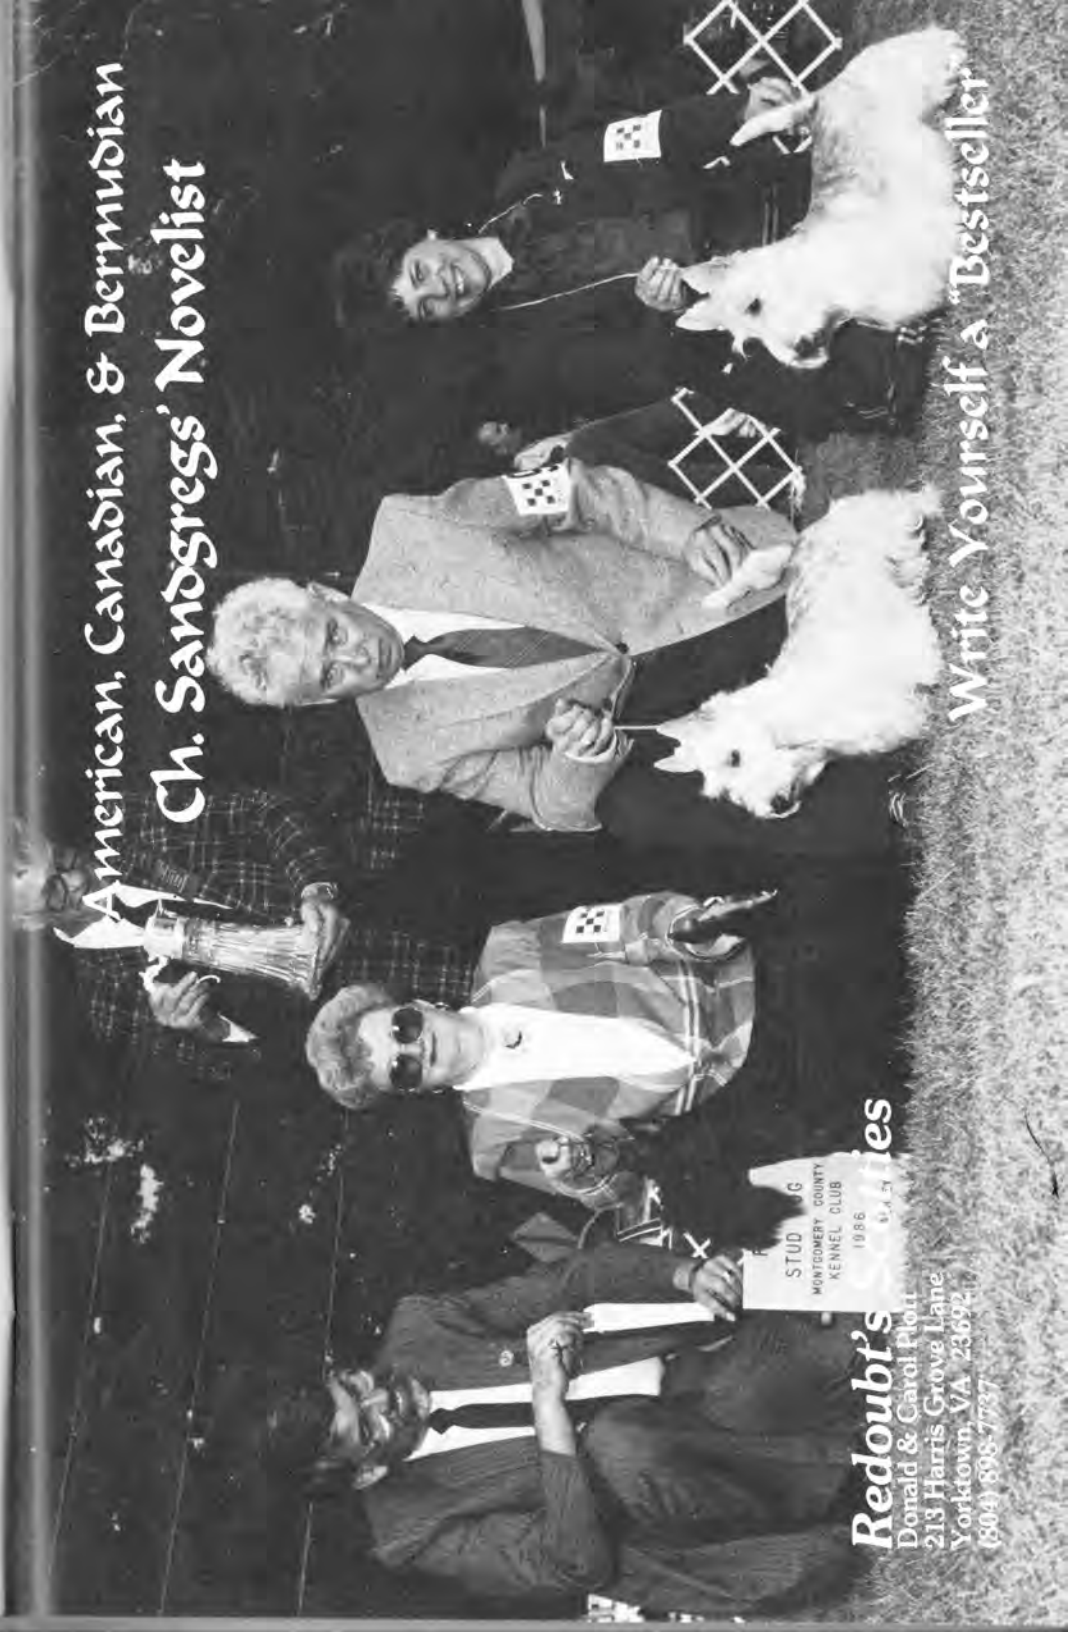

Also - in the November 1986 issue we just received, Rocky is rated under the "Annual Awards" heading of "The Sandissy Trophy". Since Rocky is an import from Scotland I don't believe he could be considered an American Bred dog. However, I heard through the "grapevine" that the Sandissy Trophy rules were possibly going to be changed to include imported scotties. Is this the case or should Rocky be (considered for) awarded one of the other trophies?

Cordially,
Mary Parrotti

Ed Note -

The champions are listed free of charge as a service to our membership. Names are taken directly from the AKC Gazette Awards. It is not always a timely reporting as space limitations dictate how many names get published in each edition of The Bagpiper. (Usually three months are published.) The timely announcement of a new champion is best accomplished by paying for an ad in The Bagpiper. Many people do this now and add "Pending AKC confirmation" to the dogs new title. This saves about 6 months time in announcing the title. Sorry for the confusion.

As far as the Trophy Awards go, The Bagpiper publishes only what is submitted by the Trophy and Award committee of the S.T.C.A., for obvious reasons, the information submitted is NOT edited in any way shape or form.

Frank Brumby: A Fond Remembrance

by John Casper

In my tack box is a rosewood stripping knife. It's left-handed so I can't use it, yet I always have it with me. It belonged to Frank Brumby.

I met Frank twenty years ago when I set out to get my first dog. My grandmother had a scottie-mix when I was a kid. Except for it's larger size, it was all terrier, and I loved that dog like my own. Naturally, my first dog had to be a scottie! In my searching, I learned of the Rannoch-Dune kennels, then in Brookville Long Island. I phoned for an appointment, and when I arrived, I was overwhelmed. I just wanted one dog and here were so many—not only scotties but westies too! It was difficult to believe anyone could have so many dogs, easily forty adults and as many puppies. I was fascinated and delighted at the sight of the puppies playing in their pens.

Frank's wife Clare was very hospitable and showed me the puppies that were available. She was a small but sturdy woman dressed in a skirt, oxfords and an oversize flannel shirt with rolled up sleeves. It was evident she was no stranger to hard work. When she smiled her eyes twinkled, especially when she talked about her dogs.

As we toured the kennel she commented on the puppies and mentioned interesting facts about their lineage and personal quirks. She knew each puppy individually. "These are my darlings, and I love each one of them. Truly, I do, but I just can't keep them all."

I selected a black puppy bitch. I wasn't buying a show dog, but she had potential. Clare agreed to let me have her, and I made arrangements to pick up my scottie over the Easter vacation. I called the puppy Mandy, and my kennel prefix, Manderley, is derivative of her name.

I met Frank briefly that day. He was on his way to a judging assignment. He said very little. In spite of his hand tailored suit and fedora, he looked like a rugby player—square and sturdy—and conveyed a feeling of strength and energy that belied his seventy-plus years. We had some contact with each other over the following two years. However, it wasn't until the kennel relocated in Middle Island in 1965 and I bought my first home in the next town that we became friends.

Contrary to my first impression, Frank loved to talk, but it wasn't easy to get to know him. He could keep your ear-bent for hours with story after story about dogs past and present. To understand who he was though, you had to know what he was. Frank was a very private and modest individual. In principle and deed he was a most honorable man, but he required study. In his willingness to share his skills and knowledge of dogs with me, I came to know not only the subject but the man as well. Like me, Frank was a teacher, not by training like me, but by natural inclination. He became my mentor, and I wanted to learn all that he could teach me.

I first learned to groom by trial and error, talking to others and reading what I could find about care and trimming of the scottie coat. Frank was still judging and would not put his hands on my dogs if I were showing. But he would look at my dog as I held it on lead, and he would tell me where to build up the coat or whatever else I should do to improve the job.

Asking Frank anything involved two risks. The first was that he only knew how to speak the truth and while he never would ridicule or deliberately hurt anyone's feelings, he didn't cushion the facts. The second was that it might take hours to get the answer, not only to the initial question but to all the subsequent ones it would have been impossible to anticipate. He was thorough! He was also extremely interesting.

There wasn't enough opportunity for me to learn with my own two dogs, and Frank offered to teach me to groom if I would work on the kennel dogs for the experience plus an hourly stipend. I accepted the offer immediately. Sometimes I'd go to the kennel after school but mostly on weekends and school vacations. Working there gave me a wonderful chance to observe the entire kennel operation from a different perspective. Seeing the dogs and playing with the puppies was fun but there was much work involved. Frank was in his late seventies at the time, and though Clare was younger it was an enormous job for them both, even with the help they hired. So I saw this as an opportunity for me to help them also.

Frank absolutely delighted in challenging me with the roughest dogs he could find in the kennel. "Now if you can make this one look good you'll have learned something!" he would say through his pipe clenched teeth. From the expression on his face I knew he was serious, but also hoping to see me succeed.

Taking the challenge I would set to work. Everything was to be done by hand. Frank did not approve of clipping dogs unless they were too old for the rigors of hand stripping. Besides, he wasn't going to allow me any short cuts.

Sometimes I would groom in the kennel for hours in the afternoon. When the dogs had been given their morning exercise and returned to their quarters, Frank and Clare would go into the house for "breakfast" at 1:00 p.m.

Breakfast for Frank was standard, two fried eggs sunny side up, three pieces of bacon, toast and coffee. I've never seen bacon and eggs look as perfect as the way Clare prepared them except in a magazine photograph. The smallest things they did for one another conveyed the special love they shared.

During breakfast they watched the "soaps" (yes, both addicts!) and after that Clare would often nap while Frank read the latest dog periodicals.

In the quiet of the kennel I would work on a dog and it was like sculpting in my studio. Except this sculpture was alive and I had to give its form definition and expression, emphasizing good points and minimizing faults. Each dog presented new challenges. When I thought I had done as much as I should, I'd call Frank in to see the results. He would carefully examine the dog on the table, then I'd gait it and he would critique my efforts. He spent a good deal of time going over the fine points with me so I would understand exactly what he wanted me to know.

He was a wonderful teacher and many people profitted from his training and advice. Some are well known like Blanche Reeg, and there are many others who just wanted to learn to care for their dog themselves.

One of Frank's favorite teaching methods was for him to demonstrate on the left side of the dog. Since he was lefty and most people are not, this took care of the more difficult side. He then would send the owner home with the dog to groom the right side and then come back for corrections and further instruction when that was done. I don't know that Frank ever turned anyone away who asked for his help. I think he felt in some way it was his admission to do so.

Having learned to take a rough dog all the way down and to work the coat, I then started helping with the show dogs. I did some of the general stripping, combing and cleaning. I would watch Frank do the heads and complete what he called the "winning touches." It was a demonstration of Frank's growing confidence in me to work on the show dogs. Often he would say to me, "Once the dog is on the table it doesn't matter who it belongs to or how good it is. Do your best each time. You'll always learn something it you do." There is a Japanese saying that every student will find his own master. I had found mine.

I also learned a lot from Frank watching him judge. He judged more with his hands than with his eyes and could tell exactly how a dog would move just by going over it on the table. If a dog was upright in the shoulder he knew exactly which factors contributed to the fault. Frank's father was also a dog breeder. When one of the good dogs died in his father's kennel, Frank would dissect it to better understand why it was good. He would also autopsy puppies to try to learn why they died. Being the total student he was also the total teacher.

My training also involved helping him on occasion with breedings. He knew exactly what to do in each instance to effect a mating. If the dogs were ready, a tie was achieved in not time. Sometimes he was very quiet, fully concentrating on the animals, for each mating was full of promise. "You never know if you'll get a Westminster winner," he would say with a wink.

Other times he would explain the mechanics of breedings which required a change of tactic because of the individual dogs. Or how to deal with a multitude of problems that could prevent a successful breeding. I think at these times I was most aware of his total commitment to the dogs, his reverence for them and his love for them.

Few breedings ever missed!

Every occasion was a learning experience when I was with him. At shows, he would quiz me, not just about terriers but all breeds. "How would you improve the grooming on that Kerry?" or "What's wrong with the way that Whippet moves?" he might ask, and I'd feel so proud if I knew the answer.

Frank gave me a great compliment. He said I was his best student because I asked questions. I felt simultaneously exhaulted and humbled - humbled because I was in such awe of the man. He was not only a "great" among dog people. He was also a great man of character and integrity.

I worked with Frank for nearly five years. He became quite ill late in 1970 and not long after, he and Clare moved the kennel to Arizona. I saw Frank once more before he died in 1973.

I don't remember how I cam to have the rosewood stripping knife. I probably borrowed it under some pretense and conveniently forgot to return it. I do remember feeling I wanted something of Frank's but was too afraid of embarrassing us both to ask. For whatever reason, it's always with me - almost as real as these memories.

Canine parvovirus: recent advances in prevention and control*Part II*Recognizing the disease

As noted above, parvovirus is not simply a disease of the intestines; it is most emphatically a generalized infection. In fact, research indicates that the intestinal lining becomes infected relatively late in the course of the disease and is a secondary event. Infection also seems to spread from the rest of the body to the gut rather than vice versa. This probably explains why dogs with rapid antibody production have less severe intestinal involvement.

The most obvious signs of the disease are vomiting and diarrhea. But since there are more than 60 recognized causes of diarrhea, accurate diagnosis and proper treatment depend on an evaluation made by a veterinarian.

In puppies less than three months old, signs that the heart muscle has become infected may be evident. A pup may act depressed and stop suckling shortly before it collapses, gasps for breath, and dies. Puppy death may be sudden and bewildering to the owner. Pups that seem perfectly normal at one time of day are discovered dead hours later, and these deaths may be followed by others at intervals over the next several days. Diarrhea is not present in these cases, so there is not even that warning sign. Unfortunately, no effective treatment has been found for a heart that has been weakened by parvovirus, and puppies that do survive often have permanent heart damage and may die from heart failure weeks or months after recovering from the infection itself.

The rapid spread of parvovirus and the prevalence of antibodies to it in dogs have had a major effect on the incidence of heart muscle damage caused by the disease. Most bitches today are immune, either by vaccination or by natural immunity. This maternal immunity is passed along to nursing pups. The maternal antibody is completely protective (provided it is present in a high enough ratio in the mother's milk); hence, there are no longer any fully susceptible newborn pups and the sudden puppy death syndrome has virtually disappeared.

In older dogs attacked by the disease, the intestinal lining is destroyed faster than it can be replaced. The result is disruption of the entire digestive system, including malabsorption of essential nutrients, maldigestion, and bleeding into the intestinal tract. If the damage to the intestines is not too great and if the dog receives prompt and vigorous supportive care, it will survive the infection. The dog may need intensive fluid and electrolyte replacement therapy, antibiotics, and drugs to control vomiting and diarrhea, which contribute to the loss of vital fluids. With skillful care and nursing, the dog will begin to recover. It takes about two weeks for the architecture of the intestinal tract to return to normal. A recovered dog is not likely to have any serious after effects.

After the dog recovers

Once a dog has been infected with parvovirus, it remains immune to reinfection for several years and perhaps even for the rest of its life. Recovered dogs have very high levels of antibodies, which has led to speculation that the virus or, at least, viral antigens persist in some form, continually stimulating the production of antibodies.

Is a recovered dog a danger to other dogs? Research at Cornell has shown that recovered dogs do not appear to be a health hazard for other dogs—they aren't the canine version of Typhoid Mary, the Irish cook who was found to be a carrier and spreader of that disease. At Cornell, recovered and susceptible dogs were housed together for months. As long as no new virus was brought in from the outside, the susceptible dogs remained uninfected. It was also possible to raise two generations of dogs in the same breeding colony as their recovered grandparents. None of the pups became infected, not even those born to recovered dams.

The virus and reproduction: a major concern

There have been many rumors—and scares—concerning the effect of parvovirus on the reproductive performance of dogs. The most thorough study of this issue was carried out by Dr. Meunier and his colleagues at Cornell. They reviewed the breeding records of a kennel of 1,200 bitches and found that no change in reproductive performance could be associated with parvovirus infection. Against this very heartening news must be weighed another study by research workers in Australia. In examining a much smaller kennel, they found significant declines in the number of pregnancies and pups born after the appearance of parvovirus in 1978. The evidence is circumstantial, however; factors other than the parvovirus infection may have been responsible for the decline. For the time being, it seems safe to say that, in general, canine parvovirus infection has no effect on reproduction, even though the subject is still receiving close scrutiny.

The controversy over vaccination

Much more troubling issues are vaccination and the proper timing of vaccination. The first thing to note is that the disease is now quite well controlled among adult dogs. The great outbreaks of 1978, 1979, and 1980 are things of the past. Mother Nature deserves much of the credit for this good news. Even before vaccination became widespread, 25 to 90 percent of kennel dogs were already immune because of a previous infection, often one that did not cause any of the familiar clinical signs. The prevalence of protective antibodies was lower among family pets because they were less likely to have been exposed to the virus. Even so, a fair number of these dogs had also been naturally immunized. Now parvovirus is so widespread in the environment that exposure is virtually certain. In the absence of vaccination, most dogs would acquire the infection at an early age. Some of these dogs would die, but the majority would recover, after which they would be permanently immune.

The greatest value of vaccination, therefore, is the prevention of illness among young puppies. Unfortunately, this is just the group that is hardest to vaccinate successfully. If Mother Nature can take the credit for much of the control of the disease among adult dogs, she deserves some blame for the continuing problem with puppies. The problem is: Nature has a near-perfect method for protecting newborns (of any species) against local disease-bearing entities such as parvovirus. This is called maternal antibody transfer. Newborns receive through the placenta or first milk (colostrum) antibodies to all the agents to which the mother is immune. These antibodies protect the young for several weeks or months. Nature, however, did not anticipate that man would attempt to improve that system by vaccination, and the same maternal antibody that protects the pups against infection also completely suppresses a response to the parvovirus vaccine. To make matters worse, it apparently takes less antibody to suppress response to vaccination than to prevent infection. (This appears to be a worldwide phenomenon, already reported by independent researchers in three different countries.)

As a pup grows older, its mother's antibody is gradually lost and the pup reaches a stage at which it can be infected if exposed to the virus. At this point, so logic would dictate, a vaccine would take effect and carry on protection against the disease. But, in reality, a puppy cannot be actively immunized, hence protected, by vaccination for one to five weeks after it becomes susceptible to infection.

It appears that the pup's period of susceptibility can be shortened, but not eliminated, by the use of modified live canine parvovirus vaccines. Some studies suggest that killed vaccines are more readily suppressed by the maternal antibody. The live vaccines are able to immunize in the face of small amounts of maternal antibody. As a result, live vaccines have been more effective in controlling infection in some kennels that have had particularly difficult times with the infection. (Killed vaccines can be made less susceptible to maternal antibody suppression when they are given with adjuvants—chemical compounds that boost their effectiveness.)

Give the absolute nature of the period of susceptibility, wouldn't the difficulty be resolved by finding a way to predict precisely when it is going to occur? Yes, but not as easily as it would appear. We do know the rate at which the pup loses maternal antibody—about half every nine days—and this rate is fairly constant. The problem is that the amount of antibody a given pup receives may vary several thousandfold. Thus, the age at which different pups will respond to vaccination may vary as much as 18 weeks. A rough approximation of the period of susceptibility can, however, be made, since the level of antibody in the mother largely determines the level of antibody in her pups. Unfortunately, practical application of this knowledge requires standardized tests unavailable today.

In the absence of any practical way to predict the period of susceptibility, veterinarians today try to reduce risk by repeated vaccinations of young pups, from about six weeks to about 18 weeks of age. Those that become susceptible early respond to vaccination early; those that have sufficient maternal antibody to last up to 18 weeks are protected by the later vaccinations. Clearly, the more frequent the vaccinations, the more likely the animal will be immunized at the earliest possible date and the less likely it will be to contract parvovirus. There is, however, still one additional factor to consider. In this day of increased concern about the cost of health care, it is only logical to include the cost of pet health care. More frequent vaccinations may provide a safety edge, but this increased insurance may not be justified by the increased cost. Decisions about how often to vaccinate must be made on an individual basis and after consultation with the veterinarian in charge of the dog. It must be recognized, however, that no matter which vaccine or vaccination timetable is used, there will be occasional failures. Some pups will be exposed at a time when they have too little maternal antibody to protect them but too much to allow successful vaccination. Such failures will be most frequent in large commercial kennels, pup broker-pet shop operations, or other situations in which the risk of exposure is high.

Canine parvovirus is by no means a disease of the past, even though we will probably never again see the devastating outbreaks of the last decade. Once the entire dog population was susceptible; today the susceptible pool is made up primarily of puppies nearing the end of their maternal antibody protection. Safe and effective vaccines are available that have largely, although not completely, controlled the disease in pups. Considering the meticulous care and effort that goes into the research, development, and production of canine vaccines, these products are certainly among the best bargains in veterinary medicine today. They are also the pet owner's best reassurance that a healthy pup will grow into the healthiest possible dog.

Canine and human parvoviruses

Parvoviruses were first identified during the search for cancer-causing agents in the 1950's. Parvoviruses were isolated from several human tumors, and for a time it was believed that they might be cancer-causing viruses. It was never possible to make them produce tumors experimentally, however. Later research revealed that parvoviruses require dividing cells for their own replication. They are found in tumors because tumors contain many dividing cells—fertile ground for parvoviruses—not because they cause the tumors in the first place.

For a long time human parvoviruses were "orphans"—agents without diseases. No known illness could be attributed to them. Now, Drs. Susan Cotmore and Peter Tattersall of the Yale University School of Medicine have presented evidence that B19 virus, the cause of erythema infectiosum—a contagious skin eruption in school-age children—is a member of the parvovirus family. As such, it is the first example of a disease-causing parvovirus in man.

B19 appears to be a truly human pathogen. Studies comparing the DNA (genetic code) of B19 with other parvoviruses showed that B19 is definitely not canine parvovirus and that it is only distantly related to the rodent parvoviruses. In fact, evidence of human infection by canine parvovirus has never been found, even among kennel workers and veterinarians who care for large numbers of sick dogs.

She's Only a Brood Bitch

by Cindy Cooke

Recently, I mentioned the name of a Specialty Best of Breed winner in a conversation with a fellow breeder who informed me that the dog's owner would only breed him to champion bitches. I had just finished my draft of the breed history for the new handbook, and this conversation started me thinking about the contributions of the non-champion bitches.

There were many old English breeders who completely disdained the idea of showing bitches. This was not, however, because they thought bitches were not as good in some way as dogs. On the contrary, the old timers felt that good bitches were too important to "waste" their time in the show ring.

In more recent years, American breeders have tended to place equal (or nearly equal) emphasis on showing bitches as well as dogs. Still, the fact remains that while show records fade into history, a good producing bitch permanently stamps her mark on the breed.

One of the best examples of such a bitch is Fitzwilliam's Fancy. She is the daughter of 1973's top-producing sire, Ch. Anstamm Dazzler Dynamic, and her pedigree is heavily linebred on Bardene. She never cared for the showing and soon retired to the whelping box where she began producing her remarkable family.

In all, Heather, as she is called, produced 11 champions, sired by two dogs. One of her early champion daughters was Ed McParland and Karla Ward's Ch. Hughcrest Happy Hour. Happy Hour is best known as the dam of the great Ch. Hughcrest Bottoms Up, a Best in Show and multiple Specialty winner, and the dam of 6 champions, 5 of which were pointed at Specialty shows, including her Montgomery County-winning daughter, Ch. Hughcrest Jigger O'Jin.

Happy Hour's sister, Ch. Hughcrest Hot Fudge Sunday, was the dam of 6 champions for owner Nancy Fingerhut, including the 1980 Montgomery County Winners Bitch, Ch. Hughcrest Helzapoppin'. Another Hot Fudge Sunday daughter, Ch. Dana's Amber Edition, has produced 7 champion offspring for Larae Shafer, including several Group and Specialty winners. Ch. Dana's Sunday Edition, a Hot Fudge Sunday son, has sired 5 champions to date.

Heather's most successful litter was the kind all breeders dream about—6 bitches, all of which finished, 3 with specialty wins and 3 with group placements. One of these bitches, Ch. Anstamm Fancy That, has produced 3 champions, including the 1982 Montgomery County Best of Breed winner, Ch. Anstamm All American. He in turn has sired 5 champions, including 3 Specialty point winners. A repeat breeding of this litter of 6 produced Ch. Anstamm Calico Kid, whose grandson, Ch. Charhill Worthy of Colwick, did so much winning at the fall specialties in our area. Worthy's sire, Ch. Sun-Ray's Summer Sun, another Heather grandson, is the sire of 6 champions.

All in all, Heather, now a 13-year-old matron, has over 75 champion descendants, 22 of which were pointed or better at specialties; and, although I chose her as an example because I am most familiar with her record, she is by no means unique. All of Merle and Carolyn Taylor's top-winning dogs descend from their non-champion foundation bitch, Neidlyre Bright Star. Don-John's Wee Bonnie may not be a name you recognize immediately, but her champion descendants include Ch. Balgair Redoubts Take a Bow, 1985's Montgomery County Winners Bitch; Ch. Ashmoor Huck Finn, Group and Specialty Best of Breed winner; Ch. Uncanny's Go Your Own Way, Group and Specialty winner; and Ch. Aston's All Spice, 1980's Montgomery County Best in Sweepstakes. Cass and Wayne Ridgley's Charves Kate Dalrymple and her daughter, Ridge Lei Dazzling Wendy, set no records in the show ring, but their names are behind nearly all the champions bred in Ohio in the last 20 years.

My purpose in writing this is not to discourage selectivity in our breeding programs. On the contrary, stud dog owners have to carefully evaluate the suitability of their dog for each bitch that is proposed as a mate. After all, no stud dog is ideal for all bitches. What I am saying is that in evaluating a bitch's potential, there are a lot of criteria to consider: her pedigree; her conformation, both virtues and faults; her temperament; and the producing records of her progenitors and siblings. These should be considered before breeding ANY bitch to your dog, champion or otherwise. By discarding the non-champion bitch from your breeding program, you are relinquishing your responsibility as a breeder and arbitrarily eliminating many fine bitches from our genetic pool.

WHY U.K.C.?

by Susan R. Pazdzior

In August of 1985, the first two Scottish Terriers were registered with the United Kennel Club. In May of 1986, these same two Scotties were the first of their breed to earn their U.C.D.'s. They are U.C.D. Ch. Hyscot Matchless Ginger Boy, C.D. and U.C.D. Paz's Here Comes Trouble, C.D.X. Both dogs earned their titles in three consecutive trials with scores ranging from 188 to 195½ and with two second places. I'm proud to say I own and handle both dogs.

What in the world made me register my dogs with the U.K.C.? Certainly there is no advantage in the breed ring. Until my dogs were registered Scotties were not a breed recognized by the U.K.C. U.K.C. point shows are almost always specialties and there is no group competition, so U.K.C. Ch.'s are out of the question.

So why? The obvious answer is U.K.C. obedience. I have been hooked on Scotties and obedience most of my life. The first time I ever saw U.K.C. obedience I knew it was something I wanted to try.

U.K.C. and A.K.C. Novice are similar but different enough to be a challenge. The biggest difference is what is called the honoring exercise. One dog does the long down in the ring while another dog does the on lead heeling exercises. The idea is to provide distraction for both dogs. The recall is done over the high jump with stewards standing with the jump between them again to provide distraction. The remainder of the exercises are the same as A.K.C.

One of the biggest advantages to showing U.K.C. is that they have lower jump heights which is a concern to a lot of larger breeds. U.K.C. believes in the all around dog. An obedience title is equal to a Ch. and therefore goes in front of the dog's name. Those of us competing U.K.C. are happiest about the lack of systems and OTCh. points to worry about. Everyone, including the dogs, are able to relax and actually enjoy the trial.

I have no means quit A.K.C. obedience. My dogs and I are working on both C.D.X.'s and U.D.'s in A.K.C. competition. I also plan to go for more U.K.C. titles. Why? To prove what I have always known: Scotties can do it all!

"Nibbles"

April 22, 1973 — December 15, 1986

When I think about Nibbles, so many wonderful memories come to mind. She certainly wasn't the best Scottie I ever bred according to the standard, but she was, oh, so special!

She had a phobia about floor surfaces that were different from those in her own home. It wasn't easy to finish a showdog that was afraid of the floor!

Nibbles was my first homebred champion, however.

She was also the first dog I ever pointed—a three point major at that. She was also the daughter of the first champion I ever owned. She was, quite simply, my beginning as a breeder.

Nibbles wasn't the most obedient Scottie there ever was.

She could scale a four foot cyclone fence or an exercise pen in a heartbeat. She never actually ran away. She just wanted to lead you a merry chase for a long while. If she happened to scale the fence without you noticing, she'd run around to the front of the house and hurl her body against the door until you came out to "play."

Nibbles most certainly was not a great producer!

She was bred a total of eleven times to several different proven studs. For all that, Nibs produced one litter of three. (And this from the bitch that was my foundation as a breeder!) Yet her genes live on. Nibbles' one daughter, Ch. Anstamm Happy Lallan Lass, is the mother of five champions.

Nibbles was the reigning queen of the house.

From the day she first tottered out of the whelping room into the living room, there was never a question of whose house it was. I was allowed to live there (it was convenient for her to own a human), as were "her" Scotties. Woe be to the canine stranger in our midst. Even as a senior citizen, Nibs could quell an obstreperous puppy with a look and a menacing growl.

Nibbles was the most vocal dog I have ever known.

She could "talk" for hours—and often did. Her range of sounds was as amazing as it was amusing. (Nibs' vet would call and ask for her to come in just so others at the clinic could hear her talk.)

Nibbles was all Scottie -- stubborn, opinionated, loving, loyal.

She was my companion and great friend for almost fourteen years. Everyone who knew her was captivated by her charm. We'll all miss her. We most certainly will never forget her.

Fading Puppy? / Flat Puppy?

by Sandi Hach

I have heard the expression "Fading Puppy" for better than 20 years, and it makes no more sense now than the first time I heard it, maybe less.

I want to share my experience with you, for I feel I have learned something, and hope that this can help someone else.

About a year and a half ago, I had a litter of four, all healthy, fat, gaining weight and doing all the things pups are supposed to do. At eight days old, first one then another (1 girl, 1 boy) became restless, then uncomfortable, acting almost like they had colic. Within a few hours, they were crying constantly, off to the vet we go. We do the usual things (at a pound weight, there isn't much to do) like give antibiotics, etc. There are really no hard, fast symptoms, just this pleading cry that gets weaker and weaker as time goes by. Within 24 hours both had died. We had them posted, nothing. How frustrating! As a breeder, I have learned that I have to accept certain things, but I want to know WHY! This was my first experience with "fading puppy", but not to be my last!

My veterinarian is a dear man, and will go to the ends of the earth to discover the answer to a problem, like me, he has to KNOW something. He inquired at a regional vet meeting, no, not any new findings on "fading puppy" -- Sorry.

All was well, until a few months ago, different sire, different dam, another litter of 4. All pups were great! They were beginning to open their eyes, and really be cute and sassy little 'bears.' Over the hump you say -- wrong! At two weeks, one of the boys began to get uncomfortable, "Oh NO!" I thought, calling my vet immediately (11 p.m.) I am sure, even knowing me, he thought "--- breeder, always think they know more than anybody else." (What he has learned is that breeders WATCH their dogs, and KNOW when something is not right.) We both knew that we were going to lose this pup, just like the two a year before if we didn't do something more. He decided to be more aggressive about treating the symptoms, but with one important difference this time, we knew we could not waste even a minute. Although we did put the pup on an antibiotic, we both feel now that this was totally irrelevant.

Before I go further, let me describe the symptoms: a fine, seemingly healthy pup who for no reason begins to get restless, uncomfortable, begins crying and acting like his tummy hurts. In fact, you can see the stomach tense up in waves. It simply gets worse, and worse, and the pup weaker and weaker, as he cannot eat when his tummy hurts and then he is gone. Since the only real symptom is the severe stomach cramp, my vet decided to see if he could calm the whole gut down. This was achieved by giving Acepromazine, orally. We also gave the pup a few drops of LRS with 5% Dextrose. Acepromazine has a sedative effect, and can be tolerated better given orally. -- We learned something -- it is the pain that the pup cannot get through. With the 'gut' hurting (and the pain must be terrific), it wears the pup out, hence weaker and weaker until the end. We also noticed something else, this pup was flat (chested) and the other 3 were not at this point. Over the years, I have noticed some pups were flat, but they always turned out fine as they grew. Upon further examination, we found that this pup's heart was on the wrong side! (The chest was flatter on the left side, therefore moving the heart over to the right, the only place it could go.) Inquires were made to the Veterinary School nearby, and we learned that another condition can exist, simply put it is a pinching (squeezing) of the esophagus, which we were told is a VERY painful condition! No treatment was given, but they wanted to post the pup.

Well, they didn't get the opportunity! Not only with this guy, but one week later, the other boy (now three weeks old) began the same thing, was treated like the first, and both survived with no ill effects. I will challenge anyone to try to pick which pup was affected and which was not, you simply cannot tell! (Chests are now normal, hearts on the correct side, etc.)

Now, this is a success story, but I will say that to save these two pups required constant attention for exactly one week, each. For one week they were sedated to the point that they were OUT, asleep. This eliminated the pain, and also allowed their natural instincts to take over, and they could be bottle-fed.

Feeding is easy, but you do have to watch them very carefully, not to overfeed, as any excess comes up, and being this sedated, they can aspirate easily. Not only were these pups not in pain, and eating, but continued to grow and develop, actually putting on weight during this week that they were sedated!

It is a lot of work, but the end results by far outweigh a mere week of ----!

There is one more thing that I feel important to mention. I made every effort to keep the pups turned so they were not lying directly on their chests. This is not easy! For some reason, all the breeders I know (including myself) insist on 'helping' mother and whatever they use to cover the bottom of the whelping box is kept nice and neat and FLAT. I talked to a delightful Pekingese breeder who 'straightened' me out on this. Logic would tell you that a flat surface could be bad, (it certainly is not natural) but we seldom actually think about things like this. A couple of towels rolled up and arranged UNDER the bottom covering in the whelping box will create valleys and hills so the pups cannot rest flat, regardless of their position.

I am not saying that "fading puppies" are always flat-chested, but at least in this case, there was a definite possibility that the two went hand in hand.

Good luck and best wishes!

Obedience

by Ruth Tryon

You have acquired a new Scottie puppy to replace the beloved Scottie friend you recently lost. In spite of the fact that he was dearly loved, you realized later in his life some Obedience training early on would have made life simpler in many ways for both of you and you promised yourself the next Scottie would go to school. However, this new Scot in your life is beautiful and the breeder wants you to show him. What to do! The answer is simple — DO BOTH!

There is a myth that Obedience training ruins a dog for Conformation classes. The reality is that the myth was probably started by someone who had mistreated his dog, using too much force, no praise or understanding and started this story to explain his errors and failures. Instead of believing this myth, without any investigation, go and watch some of the top Obedience dogs work. Their animation, enthusiasm and presence in the ring would make them standouts in any conformation ring. Many dogs have made excellent records in both Obedience and Conformation rings so forget the myth. Start your new Mac properly, teaching him to understand the difference in the two leads and what each require. Always remember that while we jokingly say a puppy has no more sense than a water bug, his brain is absorbing and learning everything going on about him and he is constantly exploring each new sight and sound to learn more. Many times his fearlessness requires us to rescue him from danger but it is not because of stupidity but because of his great curiosity, desire to learn and his lack of experience in that particular potentially dangerous situation. You have in your hands a delightful, mischievous companion and friend, willing and ready to learn. It is up to you to develop that talent and aptitude in the right directions.

Before you try to teach him ANYTHING in Conformation or Obedience training, equip yourself with a show lead and a training collar of the proper size for your puppy and a six foot leather lead. Decide what command you will use for gaiting in the Conformation ring, such as "Let's go", "Come along", etc. In the Obedience ring you will probably use "Heel" or "Watch Me". Take Mac to a quiet place with as few distractions as possible and you are ready for the first lesson.

With the Conformation lead, STAND is the first exercise taught. Put on the Conformation lead, tell him to "Stand", stack him and then give him lots of praise. Do this several times. Being a friendly, curious puppy he will probably wiggle and want to play but keep your patience and humor and you will shortly see improvement. Since you will be holding him, gently but firmly, as he is being stacked, you should be able to teach the "Stay" command easily along with the "Stand" command. Then gait him, making sure you use the command you have decided upon for Conformation gaiting. Stand him a couple of more times - using the commands "Stand" and "Stay" and then you are ready for the Obedience part of his lesson.

Make a big operation of taking off the show lead and make sure he understands it is off. Then, as an equally big deal, put on the training collar with the six foot lead attached. SIT is the first Obedience exercise taught. Give him lots of praise and attention and then give the command "Sit". Pull up on the lead gently and push his bottom down and then praise him extravagantly. Repeat this several times, always with great praise. Don't heel him until he thoroughly understands STAND goes with the Conformation lead and SIT with the Obedience lead. With all the praise you will be giving him he will doubtless try to move on the Sit and well as the Stand. Very quickly and firmly but with understanding, tell him "No" and place him back in the Sit position and then pet and praise, pet and praise and more petting and praising! Do this for several days - until he realizes he is being praised for sitting and remaining still and then you can step in front of him and tell him to "STAY". If he drops his head, correct that by little tickles under the chin, with of course, praise that he is being a good dog. Gradually you can increase the distance between you two on the Sit-Stay. If he breaks, go back, put him in the Sit position gently but firmly, give him the Stay command and go half as far as you were. You may have gone too far too quickly, before he was ready for that distance. And with this training you are, of course, teaching ATTENTION.

Make the lessons a daily and happy occasion but a short one. Five to ten minutes is enough with a puppy and when the lesson is over, remember to play with Mac. Play with him and his favorite toy, a ball, whatever makes him happy, so that he always associates pleasure with his lesson. And always think of it as one lesson combining both techniques, not two separate things that you can do one one day and the other another day. ALWAYS include both Conformation and Obedience training in his lesson until much later in his training.

As the Conformation training continues, he should learn to stack without you holding him up and with his head and tail up because it has always been a pleasurable experience. If you have taught him to Stand and Stay properly the judge will be able to go over him without difficulties of squirming, shying, etc. — and what judge won't be favorably impressed with that! With the practice of gaiting he will have learned to walk into the Stand properly as he returns to the judge without great maneuvers by the handler and his whole ring demeanor will be superior, yet animated. His lessons have been fun and the ring is just one more place to practice and work - and play. When you take him out of the ring, take a moment to play with him and praise him!

Once you have the Conformation Stand and Stay in hand and the Obedience Sit and Stay, with handler at a distance, take Mac to another area to work with different distractions. You may almost have to go back to the beginning but remember, each place presents a different distraction and as he learns to "work" well in each area he is gaining confidence in both himself and you and he is on the road to becoming a well trained dog.

As the Obedience training progresses he will learn to Heel at your side. It is here that the all important Attention he has been gradually learning with the Obedience training collar and lead becomes of such value. Attention on the handler is an essential in Obedience work. Teaching a dog to heel well is probably the most important exercise to teach. It requires lots of practice, a lot of patience and a lot of corrections - and it isn't as exciting or as much fun as the recall and the more advanced work, but it is the basis of all good Obedience work. Practice, practice, and practice - but in different locations and always on lead. The various locations will make it a bit more interesting for both of you and having Mac on lead will give you a chance to make all those necessary corrections - but make them as gently as possible, only enough snap of the lead to draw his attention back to you. It is not necessary to practically jerk his head off, such a correction is sure to turn Mac off from working with you. He needs only to be reminded that you two are heeling together. Patience will be rewarded with not just a good heeling dog, but with Mac's attention on you because he WANTS to do it that way and a great rapport between you two will develop. Remember, the more you demand of Mac, gently and reasonably and with understanding, the better he will be - and as important, the more control you will have over him.

There may come a time when Mac is well trained for the Conformation ring but there is still a lot more work to do before he is ready for the Obedience ring. However, as long as you are showing him in Conformation, keep that work in your training period although you will find you will be giving more minutes to the Obedience work. Never do only one type of training, always work on both types as long as you have Mac entered in Breed. One word of caution, don't enter Mac in either the Conformation or Obedience ring no matter how great the temptation until he is truly well trained for that particular ring. Then you can walk into the ring with confidence that you have a confident, self-assured, animated and enthusiastic Mac and that combination is hard to beat.

It is very possible Mac will earn his C.D. about the same time he earns his Championship. If that happens at the same show, and it can, you and Mac can share a steak that night. But above all, remember Mac is a friend and companion. He can't read the book to know if he is doing things correctly - he can only rely on your praise. Be generous with it. Let him know he has pleased you. If he makes a mistake - and make sure it is his and not yours - correct him and then praise him as he does it right. You will have a happy, confident, self-assured dog in the Conformation and Obedience rings, one who says to the judge, "Watch me - I deserve your attention and admiration". After Mac has earned his C.D. take him into the Open work. That same spirit will carry over and he will enjoy the more advanced work and be a delight to work with. Happy Gaiting in the Conformation ring and Happy Heeling in the Obedience ring.

 Am./Can. Ch. Glenby's Leading Lady
 Ch. Glenby Merry Machioness

"Derek", still just a 2 year old, has some wonderful pups just now beginning their show career. They seem to be getting his lovely head and eye, perfect body and fantastic show temperament. Derek is very sound and moves beautifully. He is VWD clear.

Correction: "Scots-in-a-Bag" article, November, 1986, Bagpiper

Oops, the airline wasn't the only one fooled. Even the writer thought the dog napping under a blanket between Ann Wooldridge and Betty McArthur on the way home to California was Ch. Scarista Glorianna. It was really Ken and Betty McArthur's Ch. Dana's Constant Comment. Ann says the McArthur's have flown extensively with in-cabin dogs and that many of the tips in the article are ones they pioneered.

Ruth Tryon, Editor 555 Tahoe Circle, Stone Mountain, GA 33083

The highlight of our Holiday party was the presentation of the annual Christmas awards to those dogs in our club earning a Championship or an Obedience title. Previous to that meeting in November we watched a professional groomer groom a companion Scottie and learned how to groom our companions and retired Champions without hand stripping and still have a handsome looking dog. Quite an art.

In January Keith Bates, who judges last year's Specialty, annotated a Video of that show. It was an educational, informative and interesting experience to learn what the judge saw, what he was looking for and how he handled the difference! We were fortunate to have such a program.

The members are now busy working on our coming Specialty, April 12, 1987. We hope many of you will be with us. It is a three show weekend at a beautiful time of year.

Secretary - Ani Kramer
Treasurer - Robert Young

Our Specialty will be Friday, April 17, 1987. The show site is the Pikesville Armory, 601 Reisterstown Rd., Pikesville, MD. Our specialty is the 7th in line of the Cherry Blossom Circuit and is a great opportunity to show your Scotties. The Sweepstakes Judge is Mr. Thomas Natalini and our Regular Class Judge is Mrs. Phyllis Haage. There will be as usual our lovely trophy table and gracious hospitality.

The March meeting will be a grooming/meeting.

"Scot's Chatter"

Charla Hill, Editor 5962 Cherokee, Cincinnati, OH 45243

The STC of Greater Dayton has been busy finalizing plans for an exciting 10th Anniversary Specialty coming up on Saturday, March 28th, at the Dayton Airport Inn. We offer a luxurious setting, with spacious areas for grooming. The convenience of being able to stay at the show site with less loading and unloading is always a pleasure to our guests. This will be a very special show, dedicated to Scottish Terriers everywhere. Special cash prizes for division and Best in Sweepstakes will be offered. We are extremely grateful to our neighboring clubs for having supported us in the past, and we expect our largest entry ever.

January's activities follow a delightful Christmas party in December, and they include a VWD clinic, sponsored by the club, offering free testing to all dogs.

Our club meets now the second Wednesday of each month. We extend an invitation to all to join us.

A record number of students braved the rain and cold to learn how to groom a Scottish Terrier from professional handler Bergit Coady, at the STCGH Annual Grooming Seminar on January 17-18, 1987. The student's experience level ran from beginning novice to over 20 years experience. A wealth of knowledge was learned by all. Bergit Coady is not only a top handler but an expert teacher as well.

The STCGH will hold its annual specialty on August 6, 1987, pending AKC approval. Judges are Bill Justus - Regular Classes, and Shirley Justus - Sweepstakes. Hazel Arnold will judge Jr. Showmanship. The specialty is followed on Friday, Saturday and Sunday with the Baytown K.C., San Jacinto K.C. and Houston K.C. shows. Both the specialty and the other shows will be held in the Astrohall. STCA members are invited to share in some Southern Hospitality.

What a celebration! On January 2, 1987, the STCGL marked its tenth anniversary with a birthday party organized by Vice-President/Program Chair Dan Stickler and his wife Maxine. Charter members Diane Dodd and Raul Bignon presented "A Walk through History" and members reminisced about a decade of events and activities. Charter members, past presidents and match judges were recognized. The members look forward to an exciting future!

Join the club for its second annual independent specialty on Saturday, August 29, 1987. The Sweepstakes will be judged by Michael Cook of Maryland; Regular Classes will be judged by James Reynolds of Canada*. For further information, contact Show Secretary Joan Bignon, 217 Wood Road, Louisville, KY 40222, Telephone: (502) 425-0258.

Our Christmas party was held at Tapperooney's on December 19 -- total merrymakers were 42. We had our usual gift exchange (lots of Scottie mugs and ornaments) plus a raffle and drawing -- ornaments for smaller items, and donations for larger items. A stuffed Scottie dog was won by Cerka's, the Scottie glass container with charcoal dog biscuits by Al Kinnelly, and the Scottie lap run was won by Penny Cutean.

On January 14, 1987, some of our members turned out to hear Jean Dodds' talk on VWD and hypothyroidism at the Pontiac K.C. It was very informative and easy for the layman to understand.

March 1 will be our STCM Sanctioned Match in conjunction with the TCM. Barbara DeSaye will judge in the morning, and John DeSaye will be judging in the afternoon.

Our annual awards dinner is scheduled for April 18th.

Directors - Hilda Bigelow, Marlene Newton, Blanche Nutter, Pamela James.

We are now waiting for permission from AKC for accreditation to be sanctioned and approval for a "B" Match. The GPSTC was incorporated on June 26, 1986, and we have insurance for our club as of September, 1986.

We had a grooming seminar on January 17, 1987, conducted by Charla Hill, and we had a super turnout.

Our puppy Match is slated for February 21, 1987. Several fund raisers for the club have been successful. A Halloween Party for our membership and their families was attended by seventy-two people!

"The Tartan"

The STCGW hosted its annual fall field trial on November 9, 1986. Although the area experienced a heavy downpour while most participants were enroute, we had an entry of 63 - 30 Scotties, 25 Cairns, 3 Westies, 4 Borders, and 1 Wire Fox Terrier. Four Scotties completed their Working Terrier Championships at this trial.

In December, the Club celebrated a great year with our annual Christmas Party and Awards Dinner at Phillips Flagship Restaurant on the waterfront in Washington, D.C. Seven members received trophies and certificates for having finished a champion during the last year. In addition, Robert Moore was awarded the Blanart Cup for having owner-handled his dog to its championship. The Bonnishell's Trophy for the most points received in the Bred-by-Exhibitor Class was awarded to Ann Schumann and Dick Hall. New Officers for 1987 are:

President - Norman Prince
 Vice President - Nancy Burleson
 Treasurer - Kathie McKessor
 Recording Secretary - Ann Gooch
 Corresponding Secretary - Ellen Guillen

Hughcrest...Proudly salutes "Dixie"!!!!

"Dixie" (new Ch. HUGHCREST DAIQUIRI DOLL), was shown only 2 times the Montgomery week-end, and what thrilling times they were!!!! First she was Best in Sweepstakes on Saturday under Breeder Judge, Mr. John Sheehan, and is pictured above on Sunday, after she scored Winners Bitch, Best of Winners and BEST OF BREED at the Scottish Terrier Club of America National Specialty under Breeder Judge, Mrs. Susan Gaskell from England, over an entry of 201.

This lovely bitch, possessing soundness, style and showmanship, is typical of the quality we strive for at HUGHCREST.
